CHRISTMAS IS COMING

It is still some weeks away, but the one thing capable of forcing the Ethiopian war and national politics out of the public consciousness for awhile will be upon us presently. That something is the Christmas season, with all its glittering baubles, its laughing children, its joyous song and smiling, friendly men. This year Christmas will have a material gift for the nation as well as the usual spiritual tonic. The greatest wave of retail buying since the depression began is expected to engulf stores and shops, boosting employment, speeding factory output and generally setting the wheels of business to humming.

Already Christmas buying has made itself felt, Dun & Bradstreet reporting last week in their rather unemotional style that "The chief increase in wholesale volume for the week was contributed by the enlarging holiday commitments. The assemblage of Christmas merchandise apparently has started in earnest and, based on orders thus far placed, retailers are planning for the largest holiday business since 1930." The report goes on to say that retail sales averaged 2 to 7 per cent larger than a week earlier, while estimated totals were ahead of those for the corresponding 1934 week by a range of 4 to 15 per cent in spite of the adverse influence of continued unfavorable weather.

ACID TEST FOR BUSINESS

While retail trade is thus certain to swell hearteningly, something of a different problem is facing the whole economic structure. A big part of this picture—the biggest, in fact, is the industrial side of it. And observers are generally agreed that the acid test of our power to continue industrial recovery will come in the next month or so. Since March, recovery strides have been rapid. Activity has gradually accelerated, ignoring the usual summer sag, until today indices of where we stand have broken into fresh high territory unapproached since 1931. Power output, bank clearings and car loadings are at their peak levels of the recovery period. Stocks have advanced in price 50 per cent in the past year, and only last week bubbled up to their highest point in four years. Now, however, with winter coming on, a recession is due in such lines as crop moving, gasoline consumption, lumber output and building operations. The acid test is as to whether better retail trade and other fall activities will make up for these recessions.

PRICES RISE SLOWLY

Last year there was considerable pickup in industry in the last quarter, but a good basis for that recovery had been established by the sharp falling off in activity from the end of June to the middle of September. This year business held a rather steady pace right through the summer months, except for a slight setback early in July, which was but an incident of a week or so. Some observers are now wondering, therefore, whether or not we have eaten—in an industrial sense, at least—the best portion of this year's cake. One interesting aspect of the picture is the surprising way in which prices of things in general, with the exception of food, have failed to follow the upward trend of everything else. Excepting farm products and food, the wholesale commodity index today stands at 78.4 as compared with 78 a year ago. It was the administartion's goal two years ago, you will remember, to raise prices to the 1926 level. Then the labor department's index stood at 70.8 per cent of the desired point. Now it is at 80.3, including food. For the man on the street this means he can today get 24 per cent more goods for his money than he could in 1926. As to Roosevelt's objective in the matter of prices, however, there have been no announcements for some time. It is likely that within the new deal there has been some revision of policy.

WORDS AND WAR PROFITS

Something on which President Roosevelt did speak out on last week, and rather forcefully, was the matter of United States exports to Italy. These words, taken from his statement referring to war profits, have set various observers to guessing just how far the government is willing to go. " . . . in the course of war, tempting trade opportunities may be offered to our people to supply materials which would prolong the war. I do not believe that the American people will wish for abnormally increased profits that temporarily might be secured by greatly extending our trade in such materials. Accordingly, the American government is keeping informed as to all shipments consigned for export to both belligerents." There is a sharp difference of opinion as to whether the President has legal power to prevent general trade. He probably has not, but by withholding protection he can render that trade so unprofitable that the desired effect can be achieved without recourse to proclamations.

Kiwanians Hear Prison Chaplain Tuesday Noon

Campbell Kiwanians were given a very interesting talk Tuesday by Father John Laherty, assistant pastor of St. Joseph's church in San Jose, member of the county adult probation board, and former prison chaplain. He told of his work as prison chaplain in New York, relating some of his most interesting experiences.

Taking as his theme" the forgotten man," he made a strong plea for more considerate and thoughtful interest in the unfortunate man or woman who has been caught in their unlawful activities. He stated that not all in prisons are criminals and that not all of the criminals get caught.

Everything possible should be done to salvage these people who must sooner or later come back into society. There is every hope for the man who admits he has done wrong, Father Laherty declared.

Next Tuesday will be a joint luncheon with the chamber of commerce in charge of the program. Vice President Hedegard will be chairman.

Tuesday, Nov. 19, Campbell Kiwanians will be hosts to the Los Gatos and Mt. View clubs.

Dean Whitman's presence at the luncheon was a pleasure to all.

Bride-to-be Is Shower Guest

Harold Eugene Shelley and Miss Marjorie Louise Keesling, whose engagement was announced some time since, have obtained their marriage license.

The bride-to-be was recently the guest of honor at a surprise shower given by her mother, Mrs. W. L. Bachman, at the family home on San Jose-Los Gatos road.

Interesting games were enjoyed and later a decorated basket of dainty gifts wa spresented to the honor guest.

The hostess was assisted by her daughters, Miss Ruby Keesling and Miss Betty Ann Bachman.

The guests who participated in the happy event were Mesdames Jerome Pope, Ralph Lewis, Carl Keesling, Orin Kennedy, Stewart McCormick, Harry James, Archie Keesling, Louis Shelley, George Burrow, William Wilson, Floyd O. Bohnett, Charles Fammatre, Annie Barnardasci, and Fred Martin; the Misses Ruth Hocking, Norma Fammatre, Margaret Keesling, Ruth James, Margaret Kennedy and Garnet Joseph.

Peter Vogensen of Petaluma was the guest of his "foster son," Hans Hansen, last week, attending the ceremony of Hansen's third degree in Masonry. Vogensen, according to Danish custom, opened his home to Hans on his arrival from Denmark, and made an American of him, a pretty good job, too.

Dr. Charles Knight of San Jose, well known public speaker and a delegate to the National Townsend convention at Chicago, which has just ended, will address the Campbell Townsend club Friday night.

Miss Grizzle Gives Party for Sunday School Class 31st

Miss Winnie Grizzle, assisted by the Misses Margaret and Mildred Bowling, and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Grizzle, entertained her Sunday school class at a Hallowe'en party Thursday night at her home on Campbell avenue.

A series of interesting games and stunts appropriate to the occasion and the ages of the guests, completed by refreshments, provided a jolly evennig for the youngsters.

The younger guests included Eugene Green, Donald and Carol Lantz, Willard Dunlap, James Myers, Clarence and Grady McCorkle, Loren Allen, Tommie Nichols, Patricia Potter, Albert Evans, Carolyn and Jerry Anderson, Marylyn Williamson, Georgie Swanson, Neil Kennedy, Donald and Lillie Cornwall, and Claude Grizzle, Jr.

Fields Entertain At Dessert Bridge

Mr. and Mrs. Carl B. Field entertained a group of friends Saturday evening at a dessert bridge party.

Chrysanthemums in russet shades with marigolds formed the attractive decorations and score cards bore the gay fall colors.

Five tables of progressive contract were played with high and low score prizes for both ladies and gentlemen.

On Tuesday of this week Mrs. Field presided over a lovely luncheon at the Fig Tree inn. Guests and hostess were seated at one long table, with a beautiful basket of button chrysanthemums as the centerpiece. Quantities of the same flowers in the lovely fall shades were placed about the charming room of the inn, which with artistic baskets of gourds in the window embrasures, and the many unusual and colorful articles that attract the eye, added materially to the afternoon's pleasure.

Contract bridge was played at three tables, with table prizes.

Will Ludwig was a visitor in Campbell last week, calling on his old friends. Will is now in the insurance business at Berkeley, and judging by his appearance, business is good.

Campbell merchants will close their stores Monday, Armistice day. Housewives should make their purchases accordingly, that the family larder may not run short.

Dr. Josephson Discusses Bones At P.T.A. Meet

The Campbell union grammar school P. T. A. held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Harry B. Mitchell presiding.

Mrs. Esther Short, school nurse, gave a very comprehensive reading on the care of the underweight children in the school and the progress they have made in the month past.

The unit has planned to have a clothes drive for the needy childre nin this district.

Mrs. F. A. Jacobsen, chairman for the card party held last Friday night, gave a report on the party and told of its success.

Dr. J. B. Josephson, bone surgeon, was the speaker of the afternoon and gave a most interesting talk on defective bones among children. He discussed in some detail congenital deformities, disease, and accidents, the three causes of defective bone formations.

Dr. Josephson later answered questions pertaining to the subject.

At the conclusion of the meeting the fifth grade mothers served dainty refreshments.

Endeavor Group Entertained At Hallow'en Party

One of the gayest Hallowe'en partes in Campbell last week-end was that given by Clifford and Mable Horne at the Worthin Grattan home for the senior Christian Endeavor group. As the guests arrived, they were directed to drive to the back of the house. Here they disembarked from their cars and were led down into the cellar, up ladders and narrow stairways until they reached the roof of the house. At various points along the way were stationed "ghosts" with clammy hands, Jack o'lanterns, and black cats, while wierd noises sounded throughout the house. All the guests came costumed and masked, the prize for the best costume going to Clifton Crothers.

To start the evening, John Smith's "remains" were passed out to the group as they were seated in a circle. Other games such as "murder," "eggshell football," and "sardines," appropriate to Hallowe'en, were enjoyed throughout the evening. Pumpkin pie and cocoa were served as refreshments, the evening ending with an amateur program.

Festivities Mark 79th Birthday of Pioneer Woman

Mrs. H. P. Bean of Williams road celebrated her 79th birthday with a week-end of festivities which began with a Hallowe'en party Thursday evening of last week, with Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Smith and children, Winona, Dan and Herbert, as guests.

The table was decorated with favors appropriate to the day and the hostess led the merry party in the proper use of horns and whistles.

The special event was a dinner party on Sunday, at which places were set for Mr. and Mrs. Bryant Smith and son Jimmie of Vallejo; the Misses Elizabeth and Annie Bean, The Alameda, San Jose; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gibbs, Concord; Ed Webb and sister, Miss Charity Ann Webb, San Jose, and the hostess.

An attractive color scheme of yellow and green was emphasized by the use of an abundance of beautiful yellow chrysanthemums.

Each place card was inscribed with a humorous story, their recital starting the party in a merry mood.

At the conclusion of the dinner Mrs. Bean was showered with gifts and cards from friends near and far.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith (Gladys Bean) and son, spent the week-end at the ranch home.

Mr. Gibbs, who was a college class mate of the late H. P. Bean, together with Mrs. Gibbs, motored down from Concord to enjoy the happy occasion and were also house guests of the hostess.

Plans for Bazaar Nearly Completed

Plans and arrangements for the bazaar to be held next week, Friday afternoon and evening, in the Methodist church, are rapidly nearing completion.

Various booths will be stored with aprons, cooked food, plants and other fancy articles. One that will be of unusual interest is designated as "For Auld Lang Syne," and in it will be found articles contributed by or in memory of former members of the congregation. Mrs. Charles Ludwig was the author of this idea when on a recent visit to Campbell.

A substantial dinner will be served at 6:30, followed by an entertainment.

The public is cordially invited.

"America First," Free's Topic Mon. At Woman's Club

The Country Woman's club met Monday in the Community hall which had been most attractively adorned with varihued grape vines, nandina, orange cotone aster, and a basket of yellow and russet chrysanthemums, all of which had been arranged by Mrs. J. B. Strong.

Mrs. C. H. Whitman presided over the business meeting at which newly elected members were presented, and 25 dollars was voted to the community chest.

Mrs. H. P. Bean, who had celebrated her 79th birthday on Sunday, was extended felicitations by the president and presented with a lovely bouquet, the gift of Mrs. J. C. Ainsley and Mrs. W. N. Lloyd, and a birthday verse was sung by the members.

Mrs. Ainsley, chairman of the program committee, announced the opening number as "The Star Spangled Banner," led by Mrs. Grattan, with Mrs. Robson accompanist.

The Hon. Arthur M. Free was then introduced and his subject announced as "America First."

There being many angles from which that topic could be considered, Mr. Free stated that he had decided to speak on "Immigration," and some of the conditions in our country resulting from the years of unrestricted immigration, now demanding most serious thought and action if our established constitutional government is to survive.

The speaker is especially well qualified to explain this situation, as he was on the congressional committee that framed some of the later immigration laws, by which the millions pouring into this country have been restricted, following other laws excluding mental, physical and criminal undesirables.

He showed the menace of the many thousands gathered in our cities who do not speak the English language, nor have any knowledge of what our government represents, nor have any wish to align themselves with its basic principals.

He sees as the only salvation of our democracy the awakening of every citizen to the immediate need for action, which he thinks must be the education of these groups as to what our government has meant in making possible our present high standard of living and of personal liberty.

Mrs. Grattan then presented a trio of high school students, David Bohrman, violin; Martha Jane Bohrman, cello, and Juanita Knowles, piano, who played "A Quaint Story," "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," and "Yesterdays."

Mrs. Ainsley thanked the speaker and musicians, and Mr. Thielke who had arranged for their appearance, and then presented Mrs. E. I. Price, a member of the committee, who gave a discursive talk on "Anything." She ended her remarks with the statement that we must try to understand "people who are different."

Dr. Antrim E. Osborne Called By Death Sun.

The many friends of Dr. Antrim E. Osborne were shocked to learn of his sudden death Sunday evening. He had not been in good health for some time, but was not considered to be in serious condition. Antrim had made a host of friends in this county and state which he had faithfully served in various capacities through a number of years. His interest in humanity made him a most valuable aid to the juvenile court.

His hobby was the "California missions," to which he had given much study and investigation, and Campbell audiences have enjoyed several of his lectures on the subject. He will be greatly missed in Kiwanis circles where he had been a most active and valuable member.

Harry R. Seaburn of the Nelson-Seaburn company, has leased the Louis Jones house on Sunnyside avenue and will move with his family from San Jose on the 15th of this month.

Corn-Hog Program Is Indorsed by Farmers

NEW DEALERS have scored a major victory, and are correspondingly elated. By a majority of something like 6 to 1, the corn-hog producers have voted for a continuance of the crop adjustment through another year. Incomplete returns from the referendum showed that the program was favored by a majority in every one of the 33 states from which votes were received.

Chester C. Davis

"It is only natural that we should be pleased with the apparent approval of adjustment given by corn and hog farmers," said Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, as he watched the returns come in at Washington. "If the final results bear out present indications another voluntary contract will be offered for both corn and hogs."

In a formal statement Davis emphasized earlier assurances that the AAA would seek a 25 to 30 per cent increase in hog production next year, saying the "need for increasing the present pork supply of the nation . . . will be kept in mind in plans for the next adjustment contract."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace gave out a statement commending the farmers for their decision. "The referendum means," said Mr. Wallace, "that corn-hog farmers of the country will be doing their best to increase hog production next year in such a way as will not bring about excessive overproduction in subsequent years. They realize their triple duty: To the consumer, to the cause of soil conservation, and to the maintenance of a fair income for themselves."

Before the results of the voting were known President Roosevelt announced tentative plans for making the AAA over from an emergency to a permanent agency. Observers in Washington concluded that Mr. Roosevelt intends to make the AAA a major campaign issue next year and to rely for re-election largely on the voters in those western states that have received the largest cash payments in the carrying out of the crop adjustment program—taking it for granted that he will carry the solid South.

Navy Day Is Celebrated by the Nation

NAVY day, which appropriately is the birthday of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, was celebrated throughout the United States. President Franklin D. Roosevelt gave it a good start with a letter to Secretary Swanson in which he declared himself in favor of building the navy up to the country's needs. He said:

"In the unsettled conditions existing throughout the world it is imperative that we should heed the needs of national defense. By the passage of the Vinson-Trammell bill, which authorizes the upbuilding of the navy to the limits of existing treaties, our national legislature gave very definite expression of its purpose to increase the strength of the American navy to a degree commensurate with America's needs, interests and responsibilities."

Six thousand Boy Scouts, headed by Daniel Beard, the aged national scout commissioner, made the customary pilgrimage to the tomb of Theodore Roosevelt at Oyster Bay.

Uncle Sam Is Cautious Concerning Sanctions

WHILE the League of Nations was going forward with its plans for the imposition of sanctions against Italy, its officials asked the United States government to comment on this policy, for the attitude of this country is considered vital to the success of the program. Secretary of State Hull replied promptly but with extreme caution, avoiding comment on the action taken by the league powers and inferentially declining to cooperate in the sanctions. The answer, whose tenor was dictated by President Roosevelt, was sent to Minister Hugh Wilson at Berne. It only set forth the moves made by the United States under the neutrality act and restated our government's hope for world peace. In press conferences Mr. Hull stressed the fact that this country will continue to move independently to keep free and untangled as President Roosevelt has promised.

Secretary Hull

League of Nations officials on reading the reply said it was "encouraging" and all that could be expected. They looked upon it as important moral support of league efforts to end the warfare in Africa.

Prospects for Early Peace Are Faint

BRITISH diplomats were of the opinion that the chances for an early peace in east Africa were mighty small unless Italy could be stopped by the effective imposition of penalties. The Italians seemed to have dropped diplomatic negotiations with the other European powers and started another big drive from the northern front toward Makale and Addis Ababa. The first day's advance carried their central columns nine miles forward and was said to pave the way for a general movement ahead. So far as the uncertain news from the front shows, the Ethiopians were offering little resistance. To date there have been no battles of major importance, and until the Italians have chances to annihilate the Ethiopians in large numbers the latter have a good chance.

General Graziani's southern army, in three columns, was steadily advancing on Harrar, despite rains and boggy ground and the guerilla warfare waged by the natives. The capture of the important town of Gorahai was imminent.

In Rome Mussolini told a gathering of Fascists that Italy would respond with "heroisms" to the sanctions which he termed "the most odious of injustices."

Hoare Tells British Stand on War

SIR SAMUEL HOARE, British foreign secretary, assured parliament and the world that Great Britain has no intention of fighting Italy and would not alone apply military sanctions against that nation. He hopes that the war in Africa could be settled without resort by the league to extreme measures. His speech was plainly an invitation to Italy to talk peace terms.

Sir Samuel Hoare

Denying that the government's policy is hostile to Fascism, Sir Samuel said:

"We have not the least intention of interfering in the domestic affairs of other people."

"The unbroken solidarity of the empire is behind the government's policy," he said. "Let those prophets of misfortune who have marked the empire down for decay and dissolution observe this fact of overwhelming importance."

Hoare hinted at British isolation from continental affairs if the league collapses.

Next day Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin warmly endorsed all that Hoare and Capt. Anthony Eden have done at Geneva. He deprecated even the use of the word war, but called for a rearming of the empire, saying: "In the interests of world peace it is essential our defensive services should be stronger than they are today."

Baldwin announced the adjournment of parliament on October 25 and the election of a new parliament on November 14. The campaign already is under way and is lively, with the international situation furnishing the main issues. The Labor party accuses the government of delaying action in the Italo-Ethiopian embroglio until too late to prove really effective, and impugns its motive in seeking rearmament.

Prince Von Starhemberg May Be Made King

FASCISTS of Austria and leaders of the Heimwehr, all adherents of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, now vice chancellor of the country, are contemplating the possibility of making the prince regent and later proclaiming him king. Actually the movement toward this end has been started. Von Starhemberg's attitude toward this movement was not revealed, but he indicated in a carefully worded address that he proposed to develop his Fascist ideas with greater vigor.

Prince von Starhemberg

Friends of the prince hold that a Starhemberg dynasty in Austria would be greatly preferable to restoration of the Hapsburgs. They say the pretender to the throne, Archduke Otto, wants to establish a democratic kingdom, and this would not fit in with the ideas of the Fascists. Besides, the return of the Hapsburg dynasty would be bitterly opposed by the little entente and probably by some of the great powers.

Kansas Republicans Want Landon for President

THERE is no lack of potential candidates for the Republican Presidential nomination. The latest boom to be informally launched is for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, often mentioned as a possibility. The other day there was a gathering in Topeka of party leaders, including members of the state committee, state office holders, congressmen and Senator Arthur Capper, and after some oratory they unanimously and enthusiastically indorsed the governor for the nomination. Landon had not indicated whether he would be a candidate. If he will, the movement will probably be given formal status at the annual Kansas day dinner in Topeka on January 29, the seventy-fifth anniversary of the state's admission to the Union.

Gov. Landon

President Roosevelt Back in the White House

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, deeply tanned and in fine spirits, returned to the White House, his holiday tour ended. When he landed from the cruiser Houston at Charleston, S. C., he told a big crowd gathered to welcome him that the country is on its way back to prosperity under the planned economy of the administration, "and don't let anybody tell you differently."

At an informal press conference just before he left the cruiser, the President was asked to comment on the "impending collapse" of his drive to put three and a half million employables on relief to work by November 1. He replied that November 30 was 30 days off and that November 1 had never been set as the deadline, and that he had been very careful to say that substantially three and a half million persons would be put to work. If three million are at work by November 30 he said he would be satisfied with the four-billion-dollar program, and that it could not then be considered to have fallen down.

Mackenzie King Becomes Premier of Canada

FOR the third time in his career Mackenzie King is now prime minister of Canada, following the victory of the Liberal party at the polls. Richard B. Bennett and his Conservative cabinet resigned and King was called on to form the new government, which he did at once. He himself was sworn in as prime minister, president of the privy council and secretary of state for external affairs. Thomas A. Crerar of Winnipeg was made minister of mines, immigration and colonization, interior and Indian affairs. Charles A. Dunning of Montreal is the new minister of finance and W. D. Euler of Kitchener has the trade and commerce portfolio. All the cabinet positions except that of agriculture were filled at once.

Mackenzie King

The resignation of W. D. Herridge as minister to Washington was accepted and became immediately effective. The department of national revenue announced cancellation of dumping duties on the following commodities entering Canada: Plums, prunes, radishes, spinach, and peaches.

Greece Votes on Return of King George

GREECE was all set for the plebiscite on the restoration of King George II, and if the enthusiasm of the crowds in Athens and other centers was a sure sign, that former monarch will soon be back on the throne. General Kondylis, the new royalist premier, and Tsaldaris, his predecessor, addressed huge royalist mass meetings. The former charged that Eleutherios Venizelos and General Plastiras, both of whom are in exile, "even now are collaborating for an upheaval of the state."

As a result of recent publication abroad of reports that warships had been dispatched to Crete to crush a revolt, Minister of the Interior Schinas announced he had "ordered the police to arrest and banish anyone guilty of the dissemination of false news." Revolt reports were flatly denied at the time.

Townsend Plan People Hold a Convention

NEARLY 5,000 men and women from all parts of the United States gathered in Chicago and held a national convention of the Townsend plan, which, as most people know, would give every person sixty years of age a $200 per month income if the person agreed to spend it all within the month, did not work or have an income all told of more than $2,400 a year.

The elderly California doctor who devised the plan was present, and the delegates seriously undertook the work of formulating a campaign to compel the adoption of the plan at the coming session of congress. They reported that Townsend plan units are growing rapidly in all the states.

Bay of Fundy Power

Cheap Eggs for Soldiers
Government Railroads?

Governor Brann of Maine is unwilling to share expenses, and President Roosevelt may drop the Passamaquoddy power project. That would be a national misfortune. While spending billions so freely, it would seem worth while to spend thirty-six little millions to harness the gigantic tide power in the Bay of Fundy.

Development of that project would supply the whole state of Maine with power and industrial prosperity and pay for itself.

To allow the vast power of one of the highest tides on earth to continue going to waste would be as foolish as it would be to cease using the power of Niagara.

In Milan, Cardinal Schuster, celebrating mass for those that died in the Fascist march on Rome, indorses earnestly Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia, praising "the valiant army which, in intrepid obedience to the command of their fatherland at the price of their blood, open the doors of Ethiopia to the Catholic faith and the civilization of Rome.

Also, according to Associated Press, the cardinal praised Fascism as "promising the national morality wished by the Catholic church."

Italian soldiers in Ethiopia, much surprised, can buy as many fresh eggs as they want at ridiculously low prices.

Ethiopians will not eat eggs—their religion forbids them to devour "that which might have life in the future," but they are willing to sell the eggs to the Italian soldiers and let them imperil their immortal souls by "devouring future life" if they choose.

Ethiopian tribesmen have no scruples about eating the chicken, once it is hatched, which shows that religious scruples take interesting forms. What about the "future life" that the hen might have produced?

Railway labor unions plan a Washington lobby, to promote government purchase and operation of railroads. Owners of some railroads would gladly share the expense of that lobby if they could sell their railroads at a fair price.

Running a railroad in competition with automobiles, motor busses and trucks is like running a legitimate hotel in competition with night clubs and other former speakeasies.

Russia is a successful spy hunter, having convicted on the average one every six hours, according to "Collier's."

If, in Russia, you are convicted of spying, no second conviction is ever necessary or possible.

These 10,000 spies, to earn their money, must keep international suspicion alive, and that helps to keep war alive.

Rejoicing in the fact that "the 13 years of the Fascist regime have not passed in vain, and the world of plutocratic and conservative egotisms is obliged to take note of this," Mussolini denounces League of Nations sanctions aimed at him as "a preposterous crime destined to increase disorder and distress in every country."

Pan-American Air Lines asks air travelers: "Shall we serve cocktails to passengers?"

The answer should be emphatically "no." First, the average cocktail is unfit for any stomach, except perhaps that of a carrion-eating hyena; second, it has been proved more than once that alcohol and flying do not mix well.

The President inspected "fortifications" of the Panama canal, returning from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

Unfortunately there are no fortifications on the Panama canal. The canal depends on its locks and they, open to attack from the air, could easily be destroyed. No engineer will deny that.

The way to have a "fortified" canal is to build one at sea level. In these spending days that might be done now, through Nicaragua.

Uncle Sam would have something to show for his money more substantial than groups of weary gentlemen "raking leaves."

There is encouragement in the fact that "regular jobs," not the artificial made-to-order kind, are increasing. Three hundred and fifty thousand men were hired in September, and payrolls for September are $12,000,000 a week above August.

Warner Brothers' successful production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," under the direction of Max Reinhardt, proves courage and sound business judgment.

The picture is a financial as well as an artistic success, greater by far than any recent Shakespearean stage production with living actors.

Fascinating Tales of Lost Mines

PILLARS OF GOLD

WHEN the Spanish conquerors were following the northward windings of the Rio Grande, they went as far as the northern part of what is now New Mexico. Here, Spanish legend relates, some of the padres, with soldiers at their command, turned to the westward. In the midst of some extremely rough mountains they came across a small valley, and here they saw two great pillars made of large stones.

What these pillars were they did not know, but with the curiosity to which we owe so much of our information about the early Southwest, the padres halted to examine these monuments. To their surprise and delight, they found that some of the stones were pieces of rich gold ore, which argued that their source must be somewhere in the vicinity.

So it proved; the lode was rich beyond all dreams, and the party immediately set to work, the soldiers laying down their arms to become miners. They remained in the hidden valley long enough to take out all the gold they could carry with them.

After this time, others who passed that way hunting wealth saw the lonely pillars in the center of the valley, but for a long time no one thought to examine them.

At last an old miner by the name of Mike O'Leary, rambling about through this region on a prospecting trip, found the ancient workings, and appeared in Parrot City some time later with enough ore to finance an expensive spree for several weeks. After sobering up he disappeared, only to come into Animas City several months later with more ore.

The old prospector of the western mountains was a wily creature. He preferred hunting alone or with one partner, and if he did strike gold he could be "as mum as a clam" about its location, even though he loved to boast about his good fortune. Knowing the hills as he did the streets of his home town, he usually eluded all those who tried to follow him. He knew only too well that the discovery of his mine would mean a lot of unpleasant neighbors.

O'Leary was just such a man. He might show up every now and then with enough gold to pay for a celebration, but he always drifted out of sight before anyone could see where he went. Finally he disappeared for good—nothing more was seen of him, and it is supposed that either he went to some distant city to spend his money, or else the mountains claimed him for the final sacrifice.

With O'Leary's passing, however, the secret of his mine did not remain a secret. Once in a while some miner comes to the front with ore which he claims came from that little valley in the mountains, and there are even said to be maps, made by others who came into sight of the two rock pillars. However, as far as anyone knows, the location of the mine has never been filed as a claim.

SECRET OF THE PRAIRIE

COUNCIL of war!

A party of freighters camped under an old lightning-killed cottonwood, talking earnestly. The year was 1856; the place was Kearney county, Kansas, on the Santa Fe trail. There was $70,000 in Spanish gold in that wagon train, being carried from Mexico to Fort Leavenworth. Would it ever reach its destination?

Indians had begun to follow the wagons in New Mexico. They hung on, making no move to attack, but drawing a little closer day by day. Now, as the freighters consulted with each other around the campfire, the Indians lurked out yonder in the darkness, waiting—waiting—

It was decided to bury the gold. Here, where the great dead tree formed a landmark on the trail, was as good a place as any, and there was no time to lose.

It was midnight. The full moon shone brightly on the camp and on the cottonwood, and cast a shadow along the ground. Here, where the shadow fell, they buried the Spanish gold.

Next day they moved on. The Indians followed as usual, drawing a little closer. Three days later they attacked, when the train had reached Pawnee Rock. Only one man survived; he reached Fort Leavenworth, told his story, and died.

There was no chance, just then, to send out after the gold. It was safe; it must wait until the opportunity presented. And so a year passed before a party set out on the Santa Fe trail to recover the hidden coin.

But during that year lightning had struck the old cottonwood again, and this time had destroyed it completely. There was nothing left to show where it stood. Only the tall buffalo grass rippled in the wind—grass which had grown closely over all the countryside.

Nature's Ice Box O. K.; Keeps Food 33 Years

Nature's ice box has even the best of mechanical refrigerators skinned when it comes to food preservation. Keeping food in good condition for years is no trick at all for natural cold storage plants such as the Antarctic wastes. According to Dr. Dana Coman, physician and dietician for the Lincoln Ellsworth-Sir Hubert Wilkins expedition, food left in a shack in the South Polar region 33 years ago was found to be still edible when discovered. The long-preserved food supplies were left by a Norwegian explorer, Otto Nordenskjold, in 1902.—Washington Post.

I FEEL FINE

Mothers read this:

A CONSTIPATED child is so easily straightened out, it's a pity more mothers don't know the remedy.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

Doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. And today, there are fully a million families that will have no other kind in the house.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, now so widely known that you can get it all ready for use at any drugstore.

SYNOPSIS

Perilla Fairfax and Corey Malden are to be married the next day at Lovell Terrace, Long Island home of John Lovell, her stepfather. Gathered are Tony Gaskell, best man, a Philadelphia lawyer; Hilda Sheldon, maid of honor; and Pete Wilson and Bob Coles, friends of Malcolm Fairfax, Perilla's brother, ushers. Corey, whose home is in Richmond, is very wealthy. He is thirty-eight and Perilla twenty-four, but it is a true love match. Everybody is busy, aiding in the preparations, including Jane Latimer, Mrs. Lovell's pretty and efficient social secretary.

"Now, my dear lady, this is nerves, and nothing but. Have another cocktail."

"No, thank you, but you may. Now, Tony, whether you think me silly or not, I want you to speak to Corey about this, before they start. Tonight, perhaps, might be better than to wait till tomorrow."

"Why, of course I will. What shall I say?"

"I don't care how you word it. Just make it clear that I am afraid for my girl, if he goes so fast. And tell him, won't you, that you, too, feel he is both foolish and unkind to his bride to endanger her safety as he so often does?"

"I do think so, Mrs. Lovell, and I will tell him and ask him just what you suggest. If he is offended, it will be with me, not with you."

"Oh, thank you, Tony. You've lifted a weight from my heart. Of course, I have spoken to him about this, lots of times, but that's just the trouble. A thing you harp on like that loses all power of persuasion; the same subject brought up by another has far more force."

"Yes, but you know old Corey is going to see through us. I'll bet he'll say at once that you put me up to saying it."

"All right, if he does. Tell him I did, and tell him that you want to add your persuasion to mine."

"And I do. I quite agree that he has no right to jeopardize his wife's life, whatever he may do with his own. A married man has responsibilities that a single man need never think about."

"Very well. Oh, here's another thing, Tony. I've had to put you and Corey in the same room. You see, we didn't expect Pete and Bobby to stay the night. We thought they wouldn't come until tomorrow morning. So we've been obliged to double up. I've given you and Corey Malcolm's room. You won't mind, will you?"

"Not a mite. Seems a pity to turn Malky out, though."

"No, indeed, he's more than willing. Don't you envy Corey?"

"Well, I just do. Every man at the wedding will envy him, married or not! Now, Mrs. Lovell, is there anything else I can do for you? Anything about the ceremony? You know that's what I'm here for."

"You know more about your duties as best man than I do. Don't let Corey drop the ring, and all that. Now, go over there; they're looking for you. And send Miss Latimer to me, please."

"There's a peach! Who is she? I'm mad about her."

"She's a perfect darling. Don't ever take her away from me."

Tony smiled at her, and crossed the room to where Jane Latimer was gaily chaffing the bridegroom.

"Mrs. Lovell wants you, Miss Latimer," Gaskell said. "Come back when you can, won't you?"

"Yes, indeed," and Jane ran away.

"I don't know how I'll get along without Jane," said Perilla; "I think I'll have to have her when I get back. May I, Corey, if I can get her from mother?"

"You may have anything or anybody in the world that I can get for you."

"Now that's the sort of husband to have," said Hilda. "I hope to goodness that's the sort I get!"

"You will have, if you take me," exclaimed Malcolm, who, as they all knew, was deeply in love with his sister's friend.

"Don't bother me about it today," she returned, airily. "I've one wedding on my hands now, and I never consider more than one wedding on any one day."

"Don't take it too hard, dear," Perilla begged her. "I'd hate to have you overworked to bring my wedding off properly. Are you letter perfect in your part, Corey? Or shall we have a rehearsal?"

"Oh, have a rehearsal!" cried Jane, who had returned to the group. "They're such fun."

"But not a dress rehearsal," Perilla decreed. "Come on, and dress for dinner now, and we'll have the rehearsal this evening."

So they all went to their various rooms. Malden, however, did not appear until Gaskell was ready to go downstairs.

"Go along," Corey said. "I was delayed talking to Mr. Lovell about some affairs. You go on, and if I'm late they'll excuse me."

"Righto!" And Gaskell hurried down the stairs.

After dinner Perilla declared the rehearsal should take place at once.

"Is everybody here that belongs in the procession?" asked Malcolm.

"All but the Tenney girls," his sister said. "You and Bobby run over and get them and we'll have all ready when you get back."

"Now, who, for mercy's sake are the Tenney girls?" exclaimed Tony.

"They're my bridesmaids," Perilla told him. "They're darlings, and they live just up the road a piece."

The great drawing-room was soon arranged, and under the orders of Miss Latimer and Mrs. Lovell, all the necessary furniture was put in place.

"Perilla is beautiful," said John Lovell, watching the graceful figure of his stepdaughter as she made sure things were as she wanted them.

"They all are," returned his wife. "I never saw a lovelier wedding group. And here are the Tenneys, quite in the class with the others."

But Corey Malden, looking at his chosen bride, wondered how anyone could see any charm in the others.

He wondered a little at his marvelous luck. He was handsome, in a dignified way, had all the courtesies and graces of his southern breeding, but he was nearly fourteen years older than Perilla, and years count with a young girl.

But he knew well that his darling was marrying him because of her love for him, her dear precious love that left no room for doubt of her fealty, loyalty and true sincerity.

To the idea that she was attracted by his wealth he gave no thought. Dearly as Perilla loved beautiful belongings, much as she cared for the luxuries of life, Corey Malden knew that her affection for him was the mainspring of her existence now.

Perilla and Hilda Were at Once Sent to Bed.

And Perilla herself knew her own heart. She was sure of her love, sure of her faith, and she was as happy as it is possible for a girl to be.

Malden's father was dead, and his mother, because of incurable arthritis, was unable to attend the wedding. So they had planned their trip to include the Malden home in Richmond, and Perilla was as anxious to meet Malden's mother as he was to present his bride.

The Tenney sisters, neighbors and long-time friends of Perilla, were excitedly asking questions and making comments.

They made up the list of the bridal party, and as Mrs. Lovell had little to do in her part she took charge. But the young people were entirely conversant with the tricks and manners of up-to-date weddings, and after going through the maneuvers twice, declared they could do it blindfolded.

The Tenney girls, escorted by Malcolm and Bob Coles, went home early, and at Mrs. Lovell's suggestion Perilla and Hilda were at once sent to bed.

"And no visiting in rooms or whispered good nights in the hall," the pleasant voice went on. "Now, Jane, you and I will look after a few little matters, and then bed for us, too."

CHAPTER II

MALCOLM and Bob came home soon.

"I feel like the dickens," Malcolm said. "I'd no idea getting married meant such a lot of fuss. Got any aspirin, Dad? I feel a nervous headache coming on, and I want to be right for tomorrow."

"There's some upstairs, son; I'll give it to you when we go up, and I think we'll go now."

"Don't take aspirin, you old back number," advised Gaskell. "I've a much better dose. Made up for me by an A-1 doctor, who knows his business."

"Sure it's all right?" asked Malcolm.

"Quite sure! Famous doctor's prescription and well-known chemist's make-up." Tony took a small phial from his pocket. "I always have 'em handy. Subject to nervous sleeplessness myself. I'll take mine now."

He took a small white tablet from the bottle and swallowed it, with a sip of water.

"Give me one, will you?" said Mr. Lovell. "Just what I want."

"All right, sir. Help yourself. I want you to have one, Corey."

He handed one to Malden, and passed him a glass of water.

Mr. Lovell scrutinized the label. "Oh, I know these people, doctor and chemist both. Whatever they put out is all right. Give me one for Mrs. Lovell, will you?"

"Take the bottle, sir. I can easily get the prescription filled again."

"Thank you, Tony, you are surely a capable best man. I'm sure it will do Ellen good. Now I'm going upstairs, and I advise you to follow pretty soon."

Malcolm took a tablet, remarking that the house seemed like a sanitarium.

"Hurry along," said Tony. "We don't want to enact the seven sleepers tomorrow morning."

They all went upstairs then, and to their rooms.

Next morning no one overslept.

Gaskell, opening his eyes, found that the prospective bridegroom was already up and in possession of the bathroom.

"Take your time, old top," he called through the closed door, "and wake me up when you come out."

Malden soon appeared, and gave his sleeping comrade a shake.

Tony opened his eyes and looked at him. "To think," he said, "that I've full charge of you for nearly a whole day. You've got to come when I say cometh, and go when I say get out! How're you feeling?"

"Fine, couldn't be better. Your little pellet worked like a charm."

Corey Malden went downstairs slowly. He was a thoughtful sort, and the fact that it was his wedding day impressed him more sentimentally than it would many.

Most of the men were at the breakfast table, but the girls did not appear.

"How is Mrs. Lovell?" Tony inquired, and her husband replied, "Fine. She took one of your pellets, and she slept like a cherub all night. She'll be down soon. You youngsters better eat your breakfast now."

Just as they had finished the caterers arrived and the group at the table rose and scattered, Malcolm grumbling that there ought to be a law against anybody's sister getting married. The men went out on the screened porch and drifted off to different pursuits.

"All right about the will?" asked Tony as he and the bridegroom strolled down the garden path.

"Yes, I fixed it with my lawyer to be in Philadelphia tomorrow morning and meet me there. It's all ready but the signatures, and he'll have witnesses, so I shan't need you for that. But look after any mail that comes for me here, and forward it. Here's a list of the addresses."

"How long shall you be away?"

"Haven't a notion. Just as long as Perilla enjoys motoring about the South."

"All right, old man. And I won't put it in words, but you know, after our years of friendship, that I wish you and her all the happiness in the whole big world."

Malden made no reply, but his handclasp spoke better than words.

"Now," Tony said, resuming his generalship, "you'd better begin to assume the royal garminks. You march, sir, to the robing room, instanter."

And at the same time, Hilda and Jane were trying to get Perilla into her bridal garb.

She was ready in good time, and a fairer, lovelier bride the sun never looked upon.

Noon came; noon went, and Perilla Fairfax was now Mrs. Corey Malden.

Congratulations over, breakfast was served. James Lovell was only a stepfather, but no real father could have put more affection and tenderness in his voice when he proposed the health of the newly married pair.

An orchestra gave delightful music and soon the guests were dancing and hilarity ruled. Perhaps Mrs. Lovell enjoyed the scene more than any one else.

Corey was a charming man. Older than Perilla, to be sure, but in looks and behavior often younger than his years. And a man of delightful manners. Scion of one of the first families of Richmond, how could he be otherwise? Thus ran Ellen Lovell's thoughts, when Tony came and sat beside her.

"It's about time to bid your baby good-by," he said, gently. "Do you want to take her into some other room?"

Almost at the same moment Bob Coles appeared.

"Mrs. Lovell," he said, "Perilla wants to see you alone, before she goes, and the time is flying."

"Thank you, Bob, I'll go to her at once. No, Tony, you bring her to me, in my little sewing room."

Mrs. Lovell went off, and Gaskell found Perilla and asked her to follow her mother.

The girl looked at him pleadingly, but as Tony had no idea of what she wanted, if anything, he merely escorted her to the staircase and she went upstairs alone. She found her mother awaiting her, and Mrs. Lovell was astounded to find Perilla with tear-filled eyes.

"What is the matter, child?" she asked, restraining her anxiety. "There's nothing wrong, is there? Just a bit sad at leaving the old home, aren't you?"

"Yes—that's it," but Perilla spoke brokenly and Ellen Lovell knew the words were not true.

"Well, brace up now. You must be getting dressed. And remember, dear, I'll write you every day, and you write me whenever you feel like it. Come, dear, don't spoil things at the last minute."

"It isn't that, Mummy; you're on the wrong track. I'm not afraid of Corey, or lonesome for you. It's—it's Bob—"

"Bob Coles! What do you mean? Has he been teasing you?"

"More than teasing. He just now whispered to me to remember that he once told me that if I married anyone except him he would kill either the bridegroom, or me, or himself."

"Good heavens, child, he didn't mean that. You must know he didn't."

"I didn't think he did at the time, but today, a few moments ago, he reminded me of it, and he was—oh, he looked dreadful."

"Well, come along, dear, and get off with Corey, and forget the very fact that Bobby is in existence."

Ellen thought little of Perilla's fears; she felt sure it was a natural nervousness, and that Bob had been merely chaffing her. That he loved Perilla, she knew, and he had often begged her to marry him, but Perilla was a one-man girl, and ever since she had known Corey she had cared for him.

"It isn't imagination, dear," Perilla said earnestly to her mother. "Bob has been queer and frightening all day, and last evening, too. Ask Malcolm, he noticed it. Now, I'll forget him and go away, but I want you and dad to keep an eye on him, will you?"

"Of course we will. Now, will you be good?"

They went to Perilla's own room, and changed her beautiful white gown for a russet brown knitted silk and a modish hat.

The great hall was crowded with the guests eager for a last glimpse of the now flushed and smiling bride. Halfway down she threw her bouquet. It was caught by Hilda, which was not really surprising, as Perilla threw it directly at her, and Tony Gaskell assisted it a bit on its course.

The car was waiting, and Corey himself helped his wife in. At the wheel was Boynton, skilled chauffeur and mechanician, who could, as well, act as Corey's valet. With him in front was Sarah, one-time nurse, and now maid of her beloved Perilla.

As Corey got in, he paused a moment for a last word with Tony, when Bob Coles took the opportunity to jump on the running board on the other side and give Perilla a long, deep kiss, not at all the sort of kiss to bestow in public.

The girl turned white, but preserved her poise, and calling out a gay good-by to all, clasped Corey's arm as a signal to start.

"Home, James!" Malden shouted, and fluttering handkerchiefs and scarfs waved a farewell.

Tony Gaskell turned to tell Coles what he thought of him, but suddenly decided not to. His work as best man was done now, his trust was over. And while he regretted Bob's rudeness, it was not his business to remark upon it. Stepping past Coles as if he were not there, Tony turned his attention to Ellen Lovell.

"Everything went off all right," he said, cheerily, "but I'm quite done up. You fellers don't know what hard work it is to be best man. Well, anyway, it's a gorgeous night to go to Philadelphia in a car like that!"

It was about five o'clock of a crisp, clear October evening. The party watched for the last view of the speeding car as it made for New York, and then turned back to the house.

The Busy Queen Bee

The queen bee deposits the equivalent of her weight in eggs daily. Three days after these eggs, tiny as little pin points, are laid, the blind, footless larvae emerge. During the following six days, a total of but 144 hours, these larvae increase 1,200 times in body weight.

Navajo Brave May Be Wed to Several Sisters

It is not unusual for a Navajo brave to be married to several sisters of the same family at the same time, according to Wick Miller, an authority on Indian arts and customs.

"That state of affairs is not objectionable to the Navajos," he said. "But they are extremely careful not to marry within their own clan. All in all, I would say their standards are higher than ours, and I believe they live up to their ideals, as a whole," better than white people. As the Navajos lead a wandering existence, their dwellings are emporary shelters. Wherever the Navajo is, he must be busy. Everybody has plenty to do. And everybody is happy.

ARMISTICE DAY

On the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month of 1918, a kakai-clad officer stood watching his watch near a muddy trench on the war-scarred fields of France. His battery's guns were raining a barrage of shell-fire on the fleeing enemy.

As the second-hand of his wrist watch ticked through the long last minute he stiffened, then raised his arm and gave the command:
"Cease firing!"

It was over! The war to end wars had ended!

Jubilation came even to those war-weary men in the trench. It mounted into a wave of feverish joy that swept 'round the world.

All the noise and spirit of rejoicing, then and when the boys came home, was a full-throated cry of victory to almost every American.

But not everyone heard it that way. There were some to whom the joyous din was a hollow, futile sound that could not bring back to them what they had lost.

They were the mothers, the wives and families of the 37,568 young men who had been killed in action, of the 12,942 who had died of their wounds, and of the 182,674 who had come home maimed, disabled.

Monday, the world will observe the anniversary of this fateful hour. It will be Armistice day.

We know, now, that the World war was not a war to end wars. We know this was merely the idle dream of idealists, or the deathly slogan of those who thought they would gain from the war. Today we know that one big power is already fighting again, and that Europe is on the brink of another plunge into mass madness.

Monday, men in kakai will march through the streets, bands will play, flags will wave and people will cheer. The sight and the sound will stir us, and we will remember that day 17 years ago when those kakai-clad figures marched triumphantly home.

But let us remember also those thousands who could not cheer on that day, the thousands in whose hearts dull pain still lingers.

TAX BURDEN? READ THIS!

It may be unpleasant to be bored, but perhaps it is better to be bored than taxed to death. So, at the risk of boring someone, the following list of 90 separate and distinct taxes paid by Californians is offered:

County, city and district levies include ad valorem taxes on real property and ad valorem taxes on personal property.

State levies include taxes on retail sales, the use tax, taxes on personal income, truck transportation, insurance premiums, ocean marine insurance, the bank franchise tax, the corporation franchise tax, taxes on automobiles, liquor, beverages, inheritance, gasoline, fertilizer tonnage, agricultural mineral tonnage, boxing and wrestling exhibitions, fish packing, and on gross receipts of common carriers.

Federal levies include personal income tax, surtax on personal holding companies, corporation income tax, capital stock tax, excess profits tax, estate tax, gift tax, tax on produce future contracts, gasoline, electrical energy, theater admissions, club dues, cable dispatches, leased wires, pipe line transportation, radio dispatches, safe deposit boxes, telegraph messages, telephone messages, passenger automobiles, trucks, auto accessories, brewers wort, cameras, carbonic acid gas, cereal beverages, chewing gum, firearms and cartridges, fountain syrups, fruit juices, grape juice, grape concentrate, furs, inner tubes, jewelry, lubricating oils, malt, matches, mechanical refrigerators, motorcycles, opera glasses, phonograph records, radios, fish oil, sporting goods, tires, toilet preparations, tooth paste and mouth washes, watches, mineral waters, bonds issued, bonds transferred, deeds, foreign insurance premiums, passage tickets, playing cards, stock issues, stock transfers, distilled liquors, wines, malt liquors, cigars, cigarettes, tobacco, oleomargarine, vegetable oils, crude petroleum and refining of crude petroleum.

And this long list does not include the multitude of processing taxes!

Bored? More likely you're a bit out of breath, and not a little disturbed. If so the list has not been printed in vain. It would be a strange man indeed who could read these and still refrain from joining actively in the fight for economy in government.

WHAT WONDROUS TALES!

What wondrous tales great doctors attending the clinical congress of the American College of Surgeons brought to San Francisco last week!

A big section of the skull removed—cleaned and boiled to banish disease—and then replaced to grow normally again. A California woman—her esophagus, or gullet, destroyed when she swallowed ammonia—given an artificial gullet and now able to eat nearly everything!

Deformities once considered hopeless now corrected by surgery as a mere matter of routine in the day's work. Isolation of vitamin "E" and its possible use as a restorer of motherhood to women incapable of having children. A serum taken from the adrenal glands of sheep, that may prove at last to be a real aid in curing cancer.

All these things merely scratch the surface of the wealth of new knowledge poured forth before the eminent gathering of the nation's leading physicians in California last week.

One of the most interesting cases was that of the burned-out gullet. The woman had been living two years on liquids fed through a tube in her stomach (the gullet is nature's tube from the throat to the stomach), and had given up hope of ever again eating solid things. It was a plastic reproduction of nature's gullet that surgeons gave her, and now she can chew and enjoy her food in the normal manner.

Numerous other developments were equally interesting, equally incrdible. They were equally important, too, for out of this new knowledge come methods for bringing happiness to millions who would be otherwise forsaken to despairing abnormalcy.

How California Counties Derived Their Names

Modoc county—created Feb. 17, 1874. This county derived its name from a fierce tribe of Indians by that name, which means "the head of the river," and who lived at the headwaters of the Pit river. Gen. O. O. Howard, in an article in the St. Nicholas magazine for May, 1908, page 624, states that the Indian name of the tribe of which Modoc is a corruption is "Maklaks," and means "The People."

Famed for its hunting, fishing and scenic attractions, Modoc also boasts of 450,139 acres under cultivation, 70,325 of which are under irrigation, and is noted for its fine strains of cattle and sheep. The county has 53,193 head of cattle and more than 125,000 sheep. Dairy products are increasing in importance.

Modoc is one of the few remaining sections of the state whose virgin timber resources remain practically untouched. It is estimated that 1,000,000 feet of lumber could be cut daily for 200 years, at the end of which time reforestation would have provided a new growth for cutting.

During the gold rush to California's Mother Lode far to the south, many pioneers traversed this county which was known to the Indians as "The Smiles of God." The warlike Piutes on the east and the still fiercer Modocs on the west discouraged the white man and settlements were not in evidence until the late sixties. The Modoc lava beds was the scene of the Modoc war of 1872-73. Soon after the Modocs had been removed against their will to the Klamath reservation, some 150 braves led by Captain Jack, young Modoc chief, left the reservation, secreted themselves in the lava beds and began depredations against the whites. Troops sent against them were routed. Washington ordered a peace parley and a commission headed by Brig. Gen. Edward S. Canby met Captain Jock and his subchiefs under a flag of truce. The general was shot and killed and Captain Jock, who escaped, was finally captured and hanged at Fort Klamath on Oct. 4, 1873. Population: 8,038. Area: 3,823 square miles.

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary Agricultural Council of California

Can the California farmer, already hard-pressed by heavy property taxes, afford to pay a new gross transactions tax—a tax on every transaction in his business, pyramiding and compounding with each turnover?

And if, perchance ,he can afford the tax, can he stand the equally heavy cost of maintaining the elaborate set of books and accounts which the system would require?

Such are the questions which confront the state's farming industry as a result of State Controller Ray L. Riley's proposal for a sweeping revision of the California tax system, with the substitution of a gross transactions levy for the present state sales tax and the newly-inaugurated state income tax.

California agriculture, to be sure, should not turn thumbs down on any program of suggested tax reform until the exact provisions of the program are known and until the plan has been carefully analyzed. But neither can it afford to make a bad matter worse by hastily switching from one plan of taxation, only barely established, to some newer program, both revolutionary and largely experimental.

Rates of the proposed gross transactions tax, according to the controller, would be low—probably much lower than the present sales levy, although an exact schedule of rates has not been determined. On the other hand, whereas the sales tax is applied but once, the transactions tax would be collected on each turnover, multiplying and compounding each time the product changed hands in its long and often circuitous route to the ultimate consumer.

Illustrating the effect of the proposed gross transactions levy on the farming industry, a California fruit grower, for example, would pay the tax when he delivered his crop to the packer or processor; the packer or processor would again pay the tax when he sold to the wholesaler; the wholesaler would pay when he delivered to the jobber; the jobber would ante-up again when he sold to the retailer. And the retailer would make a final tax payment—paying not only the tax on the original value of the product, but a tax on all the previous taxes—when he sold to the consumer.

Then, as the program appears at first flush ,the farmer's tax difficulties would be further aggravated by the fact that the gross transactions levy would be added to the price of all his purchases, without exemptions, such as seed, feed, stock, fertilizer, box shook, sacks, fuel, equipment, et cetera.

Before California agriculture could be expected to support a gross transactions tax the industry would require the most rigid guarantees against the pyramiding abuse. And it is probable that such guarantees could not be given, as the tax is essentially a tax on turnover, with its pyramiding features inherent. The result would be that there would be an even greater disparity between the consumer's buying price and the farmer's selling price than at present.

And of almost equal importance to the farmer is the complex bookkeeping set-up which would be required on each farm to comply with the law. In many instances, the cost of keeping the accounts would undoubtedly equal the amount of the tax. And added to this would be the constant irritation incident to the visits of a new horde of state tax collectors, accountants and auditors, delving into the farmer's business.

At first glance, at least, agriculture would seem to be better off with the sales tax and the income tax.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

By WILLIS GREEN

Tomorrow evening in our gym we play Mt. View in what should prove to be two very interesting games of basketball.

—C—

The school dance orchestra directed by Vincent Fisci has received a group of new pieces which were played for the first time at last Tuesday noon's dance.

—C—

Mr. Wood attended a meeting of the Anti-Tuberculosis association Monday in San Jose.

—C—

The first string football squad met the second string and the ineligible players and emerged from the fracas beaten 18-6.

—C—

In the basketball competition our 110 and 120-pound quints met Santa Clara in the Santa Clara gym last Friday evening and lost for the first time this season.

—C—

Practice days for the senior play have been changed from Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays to Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. The presentation of "The Late Christopher Bean" is scheduled for Dec. 13.

—C—

Due to inquiries on the subject we publish the requirements of the California Scholarship federation: ten points are needed for membership; eight of these points are to be from scholarship. An A is good for three points and a B is good for one point. The other two points may be made by student body activities.

R. Hummel Home Destroyed by Fire

The new residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hummel on Shannon road was destroyed by fire Friday evening.

The fire started in the garage early in the evening and was quenched by Mr. Hummel with a hose. The strong wind later fanned a hidden spark so that after retiring Mr. Hummel was wakened by the blaze. Most of the furniture was saved from the house before it was burned.

With the insurance funds a new house will be built on the lower farm that is nearer Campbell. Mrs. Hummel is a member of the local high school faculty.

Our varsity met the Los Gatos eleven on a field of mud last Friday. Los Gatos showed a fair passing attack, but due to the players' mud-laden shoes, most of the plays were confined to line smashes. Campbell came out on the small end of the 13-0 score.

—C—

At last Tuesday's student body meeting the freshmen gave a program, accompanied by Mildred Bowling. The first number was the class song, "By the Mississippi," by 12 members of the class. Paul Farnham and Paul Borg rendered a violin duet, "La Goldondrina." A dance followed with Elsie Dutra starring, and Jeraldine Jurras accompanying. As a final number Arthur Fields and George Azevedo played "Manila Memories" as a saxaphone duet.

Chick Specialist Joins Local Firm

A new firm was recently consumated in Campbell.

Clarence E. Nelson, who some time ago opened a feed and grain store and moved into the Miracle store building, has taken a partner. His associate is Harry R. Seaburn of San Jose, who is a specialist in poultry diseases and remedies. In this community where poultry is becoming more and more popular, specially mixed feed is one of the many products in growing demand and this firm is specializing in proper poultry mixtures.

In accordance with the 40-hour week in the postal service, Postmaster Grim is closing the Campbell post office at noon Saturday. All mails will be received and dispatched as usual, but no window service will be available.

Mrs. D. H. Cramer will spend a few days this week at the Professor Burke home in Palo Alto, visiting her son, Dr. Harold Cramer. Dr. Cramer is now medical attendant for the Stanford freshman football squad.

Mrs. Bachman Hostess to Bridge Club Wednesday

Mrs. Julius Bachman entertained the members of her bridge club at her home on Everett street last evening. High score prize was taken by Mrs. Percy Dunlap, with second high going to Mrs. Horace Lea. Mrs. Frank Anderson received the low score prize. Refreshments were served at the close of play.

Besides those mentioned there were present Mrs. Richard Knappen, Mrs. Floyd Bohnett, Mrs. William Ohlen and Mrs. Al West.

"If the people who use our cars every day are not praising them, it matters little what we may say. The last word must be spoken by the car itself."

{FROM AN ADVERTISEMENT SIGNED BY HENRY FORD IN JULY, 1935}

AGAIN, A NEW AND MORE BEAUTIFUL FORD V-8

Speaks for Itself

MORE than two million Ford V-8's, in America alone, are now in the hands of drivers. These owners have heard, from the car itself, a clear story of motoring value and pleasure that far outstrips all previous achievements in low priced cars.

Now, the 1936 Ford V-8 speaks for itself . . . new beauty of line; new, brighter colors; easier steering and gear-shifting; super-safety brakes. We urge you to get this car's story from the driver's seat—to know at first hand its V-8 performance—its luxury-car comfort and roominess.

Let the last word about the 1936 Ford V-8 "be spoken by the car itself." Make arrangements today through:—

NEWS OF THE WEEK

As concrete evidence of improving conditions, a $2,500,000 plant, employing over 2000 persons, will soon be built in Los Angeles by General Motors, Incorporated. It is expected that the assembly plant, along with another major auto assembly plant in southern California, may cause prices to drop on automobiles bought in this state.

Twice during a ten-year period State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson made up shortages in Cashier William B. Shearer's accounts. Neither time did Johnson ask for repayment. These and other details of Shearer's confession to embezzlement have been brought out by District Attorney Otis D. Babcock, who flew to Texas upon learning of Shearer's apprehension there. Shearer has been extradited to Sacramento.

A quiet check of cars bearing Diamond E licenses parked around the California Stadium during a recent football game has resulted in Governor Frank Merriam's order that state cars must not be used by officials for private "joyrides." This practice plus too many "official" airplane trips is costing taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, says the governor.

A bombshell in California's maritime labor dispute settlement was dropped by Judge William Denman of the U. S. Circuit Court, who had been asked to serve as arbitrator in the troubles. He refused on grounds that labor had broken its contracts with shipowners.

From Washington comes orders to State WPA Administrator Frank Y. McLaughlin to place at least 100,000 people to work on California WPA projects by November 11. This is looking toward plans for having the state's $222,000,000 Federal works program sufficiently under way to remove every employable from relief rolls by November 21. Seasonal employment plus present WPA projects have dropped the state relief load from 204,000 in September to 169,000 to date.

As a result of recent investigations into finance methods of practically all the state government departments, there will be a complete reorganization of the state's accounting system. John Forbes of San Francisco is being retained by the state to modernize auditing systems in all departments. This move has been ordered by Governor Merriam.

Payment of prevailing wages on California WPA projects is not mandatory, according to word received by State WPA Administrator Frank Y. McLaughlin from Washington. Recently Edward L. Nolan, state labor commissioner, had ordered strict enforcement of the California prevailing wage law on all state, city or county projects. The Washington ruling holds that WPA projects are Federally sponsored and not subject to the state law. The question was raised as a result of the San Francisco meeting of organized labor, demanding prevailing wages.

Overruling petitions that the indictments were based on "political malice," the State Supreme Court has ordered that Los Angeles District Attorney Buron Fitts and his sister-secretary, Mrs. Berthal Gregory, must face perjury charges. The two were indicted November of last year for allegedly concealing information about a bank loan negotiated by them during the sensational John P. Mills "Hollywood girl mart" case, in which Mills went unprosecuted.

POULTRY

CAREFUL CULLING MEANS GOOD EGGS

Select Best Pullets Before They Start Laying.

By H. H. Alp, Poultry Extension Specialist, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Prospects for fairly high egg returns during the remainder of 1935 may be made more certain by careful culling of pullets before they are put into the laying house. Culling at this period in the bird's development should not be made on the basis of the number of eggs the pullet will lay, but upon the basis of her physical fitness.

In practically every flock there are individuals lacking in the vigor and thriftiness necessary for good winter egg production. Retaining them will mean that feed and space will be wasted and the net income from egg sales decreased. In addition the weaker birds are more susceptible to disease and may be the means of introducing serious epidemics into the flock.

Lack of body weight is one indication that the pullet is low in vitality. Other signs of poor physical condition include rough, loose feathers, paleness of comb and face, lack of pigment in feet and shanks and a general listlessness.

The ideal time to weed out such weaklings is when the pullets are being transferred to the laying house. By following this method the poultryman will be able to start the season with a flock of thrifty, vigorous young pullets that are prepared to give maximum egg production for the feed consumed.

Such a flock will enable the owner to take advantage of the good egg price levels forecast for the coming winter months.

Dirty Feet and Feathers Is Cause of Soiled Eggs

Restricting laying hens from muddy yards and off grass until dry will aid materially in keeping eggs clean, says H. L. Wilcke of the Iowa State college poultry husbandry staff.

Dirty feathers and feet—causing dirty eggs—may be the result not only of the birds' walking over muddy yards, but also of dirty floors and the dropping platform. Coarse gravel or cinders in front of the house and clean litter or wire floors in the house will correct this trouble.

Gathering eggs often, and use of clean nesting material will also help prevent dirty eggs. Use of excelsior or wood wool in nests which have bottoms of ¼-inch hardware cloth will help. To prevent overcrowding and a large number of eggs spoiled by broken eggs, Wilcke recommends the use of one nest for each five birds.

Housing Leghorn Pullets

When leghorn pullets are housed it is best to keep them confined until spring. They form a strong attachment for their old roosting places and will return after several weeks in the laying house. This causes confusion on the poultry farm and makes a lot of extra work if the birds have to be gathered up and moved back to the laying house in the face of a storm. Pullets that will not roost in colony houses at night will often go into the houses and roost during the day if a strong wind is blowing. Then the trapdoor can be closed and the birds confined until night when they can easily be caught. When catching the pullets, avoid as much confusion as possible. They are sensitive birds and the poultryman who does not frighten them will find it easier to manage the flock in confinement and they will eat more laying mash and produce eggs at an earlier date than the flock that is half wild.

Care of Pullets

Housing pullets early and being sure that they are comfortable are two of the main requirements for success in winter egg production, says Miss Cora Cooke, extension poultry specialist, University farm, St. Paul. This means having the poultry house ready early and having it properly insulated, ventilated and equipped. The essentials in housing are that the house be dry, warm, light, sanitary, and of the right size. After all, these requirements are simple and not necessarily expensive. Many houses that are now very unsatisfactory could be fixed up at practically no cash outlay. New temporary quarters may even be made from baled straw.

Brown Eggs Just as Good

Those housewives who insist on white eggs instead of brown ones are not only fooling themselves but are putting an added strain on the family budget. Experts declare the only difference is in the color of the shell. But there is a general belief to the contrary and whites usually command a slightly higher price than the browns. A close comparison will show that brown-shelled eggs are usually richer in color, if not in good value.—Pathfinder Magazine.

LET JUNIOR MAKE OWN SIMPLE FROCK

PATTERN 9606

Lives there a Junior Miss who couldn't "fall" for this smart yet simple school frock? We just know she will want to make her first fall frock from this pattern, because it's so very easy to cut, assemble and stitch, and if Mother is too busy to supervise the operation, take the pattern and some pretty cotton to sewing class and work on it there. The youthful, square neck adopts a scarf-like collar to slip under its tab, the puffed sleeves have a hearty slash. Action pleats grace back bodice and skirt, a box pleat, the side front skirt.

Pattern 9606 may be ordered only in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14. Size 12 requires 2⅝ yards 36 inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting. Complete diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 232 West Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

PIMIENTO AND PIMENTO

Pimiento (pronounced pim-yen-toe, accent on next to last syllable) is a Spanish sweet pepper that is used chiefly for stuffing olives, seasoning cheeses and in making salads. It is popularly, but erroneously, spelled "pimento." But pimento (pronounced as spelled, with next to last syllable accented) is allspice, the dried aromatic berries of a West Indian tree. The volatile oil of the pimento is used in cookery, in medical preparations and in perfumes.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

The Trouble

When a man is in love he says what he thinks—and more.

Now Science Explains Why So Many People Past 40

Feel That They're Slipping Losing Their "Grip" on Things

Many people 'round 40 think they're "growing old." They feel tired a lot . . . "weak." Have headaches, dizziness, stomach upsets.

Well, scientists say the cause of all this, in a great many cases, is simply an acid condition of the stomach. Nothing more.

All you have to do is to neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed. That's all!

Try this. Soon you'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS'" or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building — Washington, D. C.

Washington.—In days not so far in the distant past, an argument could be developed in any community where there were more than a handful of Democrats if one took the position that the rights of the federal government were predominant over states' rights. States' rights constituted an issue that never died politically until the New Deal arrived on the scene at Washington. Through some two years or more now, we had heard very little about states' rights. Yet, within the last few days, we have found that the states' rights issue was not dead. It was only sleeping, and it has come to life in a really big way.

States' Rights

New Deal policies have been consistently policies of centralization of power in the hands of the federal government. New Dealers have enacted much legislation and have carried out many programs that appear to be contrary to the views which used to be held by advocates of states' rights. These things have been accomplished with almost no complaint from the Democratic side and with only a minimum of squawking from New Deal opposition from whence came complaints about regimentation and extension of government functions into the field of private enterprise in competition with the government's citizens.

Lately, however, some thirty or thirty-five cities have awakened with a shock and have rendered one New Deal program a severe jolt by that awakening. I refer to the plans for government construction of the so-called low cost housing projects. These were and are intended to provide apartments or small homes for families in the very low income brackets and to provide work for labor in their construction. Eventually, it was hoped, the program would use up a good many hundred million dollars of work-relief funds. Some has already been spent; some projects have been completed, and these results coincided with the arrival of tax paying time in certain localities. That was the crux.

To show what has happened in those cities and areas wherein the low cost housing projects have been planned or completed, let us take a particular case, namely, the housing project in Atlanta, Georgia. It is of no use to cite the facts in all of them, because the Atlanta case is typical.

Atlanta Project

Secretary Ickes and his Public Works administration had spent approximately three million dollars in the construction of the Atlanta housing layout. No sooner had this been accomplished, however, than the city of Atlanta awakened to the fact that it would get no taxes nor will the state of Georgia get taxes from this great investment. The project was ruled by Comptroller General J. R. McCarl to be federally owned. As such, it was not subject to state or municipal taxation. The city of Atlanta and the state of Georgia had been deriving taxes from the real estate now owned by Uncle Sam.

It was Atlanta's turn to move. It announced through its properly constituted city authorities that if there were no taxes, then Atlanta could not furnish fire and police protection for the property nor could it supply water for the tenants nor would it permit children of those tenants to attend the Atlanta schools as free students. Atlanta contended that it bears the burden of these expenses and it was not going to add to that burden without reimbursement.

Secretary Ickes sought then to offset the Atlanta ultimatum by tendering funds, taxpayer's money, to the city of Atlanta equal to the amount he thought the city would receive in taxes. Again, Mr. McCarl stepped in. He said that since the property was owned by the federal government it was not subject to taxes and therefore a payment to the city of Atlanta out of federal funds constituted a gratuity. In other words, it was an illegal proposition.

The comptroller general's ruling was so definite and positive that those who have been boosting and boasting about low cost housing projects have been stunned. Frankly, they do not know which way to turn. Thus far, they have not discovered a ray of light to lead them. The housing projects are held in abeyance.

The housing project situation brings to the fore a condition which apparently had not been generally recognized. It relates, of course, to the general subject of taxation but it has a bearing upon many policies now operative and which, it is fair to say, have been described by President Roosevelt as experimental. Since they are experimental, it seems to me they ought to be examined from this taxation phase.

Enter Taxation

One can understand readily the base of the objection. There is hardly a city or town or even any other kind of taxing district in the United States where the tax rates are not at the very peak which the people can carry. That was shown vividly a year ago when Congress thought it necessary to enact legislation permitting municipalities the privilege of declaring themselves virtually bankrupts and according them the right of compromising with the bondholders under a decree of a United States court. So, when we think of taking away taxable property in any city and making it non-taxable by conversion from private to federal government, we see how it adds a further burden of taxes to the remaining privately owned property. That is the reason why many municipalities are fearful of government ownership of railroads, for example, since the railroads are heavy taxpayers in every community they serve. Laying aside the question of merit or lack of merit in the proposition of government ownership of railroads, no municipality can afford to overlook the loss of tax receipts that would follow government acquisition of those carrier properties. They pay real estate taxes in the United States annually of more than three hundred million dollars. Of course it is distributed in thousands of places but whatever the amount may be in your community or any other, it represents a tax source which the local government can ill afford to lose.

It is the same, although to a lesser degree, with respect to the housing project. In this statement I mean only as to the local tax phase. It has, however, another very important tax angle. Property, or the income from property, everywhere is subjected to three tax assessments. First, the county or city in which the property is located takes a tax toll; second, the state gets a share, and thirdly, the federal government either by income or some other tax gets its hand into the pocket of a property owner.

In the case of the low cost housing project, it was necessary to calculate the rental rate on a base so low that it would be impossible for the total receipts to pay off the government investment. This had to be done if the low cost housing was to be supplied at a rate the poorer classes could pay. It is seen, therefore, that there was a deficit staring the project in the face.

And so it is with a great many other of the experiments where such programs place government-owned agencies or industries in competition with citizens. Take the Tennessee Valley hydro-electric project for another example. The federal government has placed more than $131,000,000 in that venture. The present Tennessee Valley corporation has taken over these properties at about one-third of this amount, a net loss to the government. But that is not all. The vast project that has been developed in the Tennessee valley and through the adjoining counties and cities is not subject to state taxation nor do the cities that are being served by Tennessee river electricity get any taxes from this source. It may be sound in the theory but I am fearful that the inbred opposition to federal government encroachment on local affairs sooner or later will cause a new explosion.

Earlier in this discussion I mentioned the ruling by Comptroller General McCarl who acted, of course, as the head of the general accounting office. This agency was created with a very definite purpose in mind. Congress wanted some independent group or authority to watch all federal expenditures to make certain that they were made in accordance with law. A good many years ago when this job was done by the comptroller of the treasury, it was not infrequent that an adverse ruling by the comptroller put the comptroller in a tough spot.

Always the Goat

Mr. McCarl is not popular. Privately and publicly, he has been criticized, sometimes in language hardly printable. These complaints always have come from someone whose idea of spending money was found by Mr. McCarl not to be in accordance with the law. Always, he was the goat.

He has been the goat much more under the New Deal than ever before. Every time he kicks over a New Deal plan, the sponsors of that plan brand him as a Tory or a Reactionary or as being just plain dumb. He has engaged in controversy with none of them. He has contended that his decisions were rendered in accordance with the law which he was directed by congress to construe. But it is true of all humans. When a pet plan is destroyed, one tries to find somebody on whom to pin the blame.

Not Nine, but 50,000 Planets, Says Scientist

The solar system, of which the earth is a part, probably contains not 9 but 50,000 planets, it has been estimated by Prof. Armin O. Leuschner, of the University of California. In addition to the well known ones, Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus Neptune, and Pluto, a swarm of lesser objects have orbits around the sun, most of them in the region between Mars and Jupiter. Nearly 1,300 of the small bodies, or asteroids, have been located since the beginning of the last century, on the first night of which the Italian astronomer Guiseppe Piazzi sighted the first, Ceres.—Literary Digest.

WELL QUALIFIED

A bulky, bearded man came unannounced into the office of the gentle scholar who is headmaster of one of the best preparatory schools in Massachusetts. He lost no time in formalities, but announced, in a deep, terrifying voice, "I wish to teach in your school. I am a Rooshan, but I am interested in all literatures —Rooshan, and Spaneesh, and French, and Engleesh." He paused impressively and tapped the stupefied Head on the knee. "And," he added, "I can chin myself with one arm."—New Yorker.

ALL-RUBBER GLIDER

Soviet Russia claims an all-rubber glider, with all normal features of ordinary gliders, as its latest contribution to aviation. The framework is made of soft collapsible rubberized cloth tubes and the entire plane is covered with the same airtight material. It weighs only 45 pounds and must be blown up with air. When deflated it may be folded compactly into an ordinary suitcase and can easily be carried to a convenient elevation suitable for taking off.

Willow Glen Theater

He's a one-man amateur night—funnier than all the crooners, hoofers, nit-wits and acrobats that ever got the gong ,rolled into one! What a panic it is when Joe steps out to steal the show on Broadway—surrounded by the biggest cast of stars he's ever had—in a great big picture loaded with gags and girls, roars and rhythm! Joe E. Brown in "Bright Lights," with Patricia Ellis, Joe Cawthorn, An Dvorak and William Gargan, coming Friday and Saturday, Nov. 8 and 9.

Another big scoop coming to the Willow Glen theater Sunday and Monday, Nov. 10 and 11, is Wallace Beery in "West Point of the Air." All the heaven's a stage for Uncle Sam's fighting men! At last there's something new over the clouds! Nothing like it in the history of screen thrills. Wallace Beery, funny, lovable, in a grand human role. Entertainment that zooms to the heavens on the wings of romance . . . then dives with throttle wide open; thrills, throbs, laughs, all the way! "Hell Divers" was great, but wait till you see this one! The supporting cast consists of Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lewis Stone and James Gleason.

Above and beyond the technicolor triumph, "Becky Sharp," showing Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 12, 13 and 14, offers an absorbing, pefectly executed drama, rich in striking characterizations and entertainment values, one which, even without color, claims a place among the year's most noteworthy cinematic achievements.

Coming as a Rouben Ramoulian production, "Beck Sharp" offers the finest of Miss Hopkins' artistry. As fiction's immortal coquette, the blonde and lovely Miss Hopkins has a role demanding both sparkling humor and tense emotion. She is brilliantly suported by Frances Dee, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Billie Burke, Allison Skipworth and other notable players.

Stuffed with food —starved for vitamins

THE foods your children eat assume new importance in winter. No matter how much they eat, they may not be in vibrant health unless they get an abundance of vitamins A and D. These two vitamins help guard your children against winter's ills.

Through the long weeks of indoor days, children lose vitality. They miss the outdoor play, the summer sunshine. Vitamin A helps protect little bodies against infection in general. Vitamin D furnishes the "sunshine" values that prevent rickets, and build strong bones and teeth.

Fortunately, you can make certain that your children obtain a plentiful supply of these two valuable vitamins. In McKESSON'S VITAMIN CONCENTRATE TABLETS OF COD LIVER OIL. Children like their tempting taste. Each delicious, chocolate-coated tablet brings all the vitamins in one teaspoonful of Cod Liver Oil, U. S. P. X. (revised 1934). Also, each tablet contains one grain of dicalcium phosphate.

They're so easy to take. You will enjoy trying them yourself. Help build up family resistance with these delightful food elements. Get them at any reliable drug store. A dollar bottle brings you 100 McKESSON'S VITAMIN CONCENTRATE TABLETS.

P.G. and E. REDUCES ELECTRIC RATES

New low rates will apply on electricity used in the home and for commercial lighting throughout P. G. & E. system. Over 690,000 customers will benefit by this saving of nearly $4,000,000 a year, beginning with January bills.

CHEAPER ELECTRICITY
Reduced electric rates mean just one thing—cheaper electricity. To each individual home in the P. G. and E. system and to all commercial lighting customers that means more comforts and conveniences from electricity at no additional cost.

APPLIES TO JANUARY BILLS
The reduced electric rates take effect automatically and apply on January bills to all domestic users and to all commercial lighting customers.

WHY this reduced electric rate?
This substantial saving to our customers of nearly $4,000,000 has been long under consideration and we have been planning carefully for it. We feel now we can justify it on the following four points of good business. These four points are:

1. Increased demand for electricity stimulated in part by the special inducement rate of the past year and in part by better business conditions.
2. Lowered financing costs brought about by reducing interest charges of a large part of the company's bonded debt with 4 per cent bonds.
3. Reduced management and operating costs which were lowered through the consolidation of several properties.
4. By economies put in effect in every department.

Take advantage of the new low electric rates. Do more electrically, now that all types of electric equipment for the home will cost less to use.

Electric Rates Cut again and again and AGAIN!

Electric rates have dropped steadily and consistently in the P. G. and E. system.

In 1928 . . . rates were reduced by $2,418,900 yearly.

Again in 1930 . . . rates dropped by $3,020,000 yearly.

Again in 1935 . . . an inducement rate is saving customers $1,600,000 in one year.

NOW AGAIN in 1935-36 reduced rates save $3,924,000 yearly. In only eight years accumulated rate reductions have amounted to $54,621,000.

Electricity IS cheaper in California, with P. G. & E. electric rates among the lowest in the country
